NAKHON NAYOK

Nakhon Nayok is an ancient town since Dhavaravadi period, assumed from its remaining wall and moat in Tambon Dong Lakhon. The town name “Nakhon Nayok” is found in artefact from Ayutthaya period as an eastern forefront of battles during the reign of King U-Thong. In 1894, King Rama V of Rattanakosin had redesigned the administrative structure and that made Nakhon Nayok part of province. Until 1902, the position of ruler was replaced by governor. Nakhon Nayok was combined as part of Prachin Buri and Saraburi during 1943-1946, before it was set up as a province eventually.

Formerly, Nakhon Nayok was known as “Ban Na”. It was said that during Ayutthaya period, the province was blanketed with jungle. Its high plain made it difficult to thrive on farming. Moreover, pandemic of malaria had driven people to else where, leaving Ban Na as empty town. When the King had realized such difficulty, he wiped the rice tax. This had attracted people to come back, making Ban Na a big community again. So, the people called this city “Mueang Nayok” or literary the city of prime minister.

Chao Pho Khun Dan Shrine

Chao Pho Khun Dan Shrine (ศาลเจ้าพ่อขุนด่าน)

The sacred spirit of Chao Pho Khun Dan earns great respect from the people. Historically, he was chief of Nakhon Nayok check point during Ayutthaya period. In 1767, while King Naresuan the Great was fighting against Burmese Army, Khmer Army had invaded and captured people in Prachin Buri and around and heading back to Cambodia. The Khmer Army has occupied Prachin Buri and Nakhon Nayok, so Khun Dan and other people escaped to Khao Cha-ngok and then came back to beat the Khmer Army. Legend said that during WWII, Japanese Army has used Khao Cha-ngok as a stronghold and destroyed the shrine, so the spirit has magically killed a number of Japanese soldier.

Phra Buddha Chai (พระพุทธฉาย)

The painting of Buddha on a small cliff close to Khao Cha-ngok is covered under a pavilion. Without clear history, the paintings of Buddha in different attitudes were found in 1942 and repainting work was undertaken. The local people consider the paintings as a sacred thing. Annual celebration are held every mid of February.

A trail from back of Wat Phra Chai leads to Namtok Phra Chai, a small falls plunging from 30-metres high cliff to the pond below. Tourist can enjoy swimming.

Besides such attractions, tourist can enjoy exploring around by car or bicycle which is available for rent at tourist centre. Tourist facilities available include tourist accommodation, meeting room, youth camp and sport facilities such as shooting range, golf course, snooker club, karaoke. Luang Pho Sian Nakhon (หลวงพ่อดีเขยนคร)

The sacred Buddha statue is situated in Wat Bunnak Rakkitarom (Wat Tam), Tambon Nakhon Nayok. Assumed as a statue built in Sukhothai period, head of the statue, without body, was found in 1952. Located spirit distilling plant, close to Wat Nang Hong, Tambon Tha Chang. It was kept in Nayok Pittaya School (not exist now) before being moved to this temple. In 1968, the statue was completed, placed in a pavilion, and named Luang Pho Sian Nakhon. The temple also has a huge principle Buddha statue by the dhamma practicing area and a pavilion by the pond which is nice for relaxing.

Wat Yai Thakkhinaram (วัดใหญ่ทักษิณาราม)

Situated by Nakhon Nayok River in Tambon Ban Yai, the ancient temple is probably built by Laotian people migrated from Vientiane during the war between Lao and France. When Laos lost the war, the people migrated to the south and a group has settled in Nakhon Nayok and built a village called "Ban Yai Lao". The temple was built in 1780 and named Wat Ban Yai Lao. It was renamed into "Wat Yai Thakkhinaram" in 1941. The temple has a huge ubosoth or chapel, 6 metres wide, 10.15 metres long and 10 metres high, surrounded with a wall. Built by technician from Vientiane, the ubosoth was built with cement with tile roof. Its carved wooden doors depict demons, an arm raising club and another arm akimbo. The carved gable depicts an angle. The surrounding walls has arch gate in oriental style with statues of guardian European soldier at both sides. The ubosoth is always closed. Tourist can request the abbot for visiting.

How to get there: From downtown Nakhon Nayok, the temple can be reached via highway 3049 then turn right into Ban Yai Village.

Wat Phrammani (วัดพราหมณี) is located at Mu 9, Tambon Sarika, Km.5, on the way to Namtok Sarika. The temple houses a much revered Buddha image Luangpho Pak Daeng

(the red-lipped Buddha image) clad in a bullet wood flower pattern cloak brought here from Vientiane by migrating Laotians.

The 37th Quartermaster Infantry of the Japanese Military Memorial is also located in this temple. During the Greater East Asia War (1939-1945), the 37th Quartermaster Infantry of the Japanese Military located their camp at the temple. In 1989, the Friend of Asian Alliance War Association built the memorial to honour the 7,929 soldiers who died in the war. Their ashes which were once placed in the temple are now put in the altar of the memorial. For more information, Tel: 0 3738 6166-7.

Memorial of the Japanese 37th Army Division (อนุสรณ์สถานกองพลทหารญี่ปุ่นที่ ๓๗)

The memorial is situated in Wat Phrammani, Tambon Sarika, kilometre. 5 on the way to Namtok Sarika-Nang Rong. The Japanese 37th Army Division War Comrade Association has set its camp in the temple during WWII(1939-1945). The Japanese 37th Army Division War Comrade Association has built the memorial in 1989 to commemorate 7,929 soldiers from the Japanese 37th Army who died in the war. All ashes buried in the temple's compound were moved to be placed into the memorial.

Around the temple's compound is artificial zoo where a number of wildlife statue are placed around such as elephant, cow, buffalo, deer and etc. There is a Buddha image with red lips placed in the area. It is said that Laotian people had brought this Buddha image from Vientiane when the city was invaded. The Buddha image is called "Phra Buddha Rup Pak Daeng" or the red-lipped Buddha Image. This is a sacred icon among Thai and foreigner. For more information, call 0 3738 6166-7.

Dong Lakhon Ancient Town (เมืองโบราณดงละคร)

The ancient town is located in Tambon Dong Lakhon, 9 kilometres from downtown Nakhon Nayok via highway 3076. Motorist should turn right and keep going for other 6.3 kilometres, via Wat Chedi Thong, and go to Wat Dong

Dong Lakhon Ancient Town

Lakhon. This ancient town was formerly called “Laplae City”. It can be dated back to Dhavaravadi and Khmer era. The hill of Dong Lakhon or Dong Yai acquires 6 sq. kms. Inside is an ancient town called Dong Lek, which is an oval shaped town lying rather west of the hill. The town is ringed by two walls and a moat, like most town in Dhavaravadi period. This town is probably the residential area of the rulers, while the people should scatter around. The town prosperity can be divided obviously into two periods. The first period, 9-11th century, the town was dominated by Dhavaravadi culture. The second period, 12th-14th century, it had Khmer culture and pre-Ayutthaya culture. By the 14th century, people of Dong Lakhon might migrate and resettle along main rivers in Nakhon Nayok. The city might be related to Si Mahosot Town in Prachinburi, which is only 55 kilometres away. Antique found around the site include broken terra cotta and blue ceramic, glass beads, stone beads, terra cotta coins, lead sheets, bronze earrings, gold leaf, gold-plated Buddha Image head, laterite stupa, bronze rings and bracelets.

Legend says this city once was a secret place of Khmer queen which was difficult for outsider to get in. Lush jungle blanketing around made it a maze where people can easily get lost inside. During holy days, people always hear traditional music like classical dance is performing in the palace. So they call the place Dong Lakhon or “the jungle of classical dance”. Another clue says Dong Lakhon may derive from Dong Nakhon or the jungle city. The Fine Art Department has registered it as National Ancient Site on March 8, 1935.

TOURIST'S TREKKING TIPS

Preparation for exploring the jungle

- Study about the destinations for preparing proper equipments as each destination provide different facilities.
- Wear comfortable attire but not too loose. Prepare hat, sock, and jacket in natural hues such as green, brown, blue, grey or black.
- Use light, necessary and practical gears such as backpack, tent, sleeping back, food, drinking water, flysheet, medicines, torch, knife, compass, jacket, shoes or boots, insect repellent, and other proper stuffs.
- Do not use perfume during the trip as it may attract insects. Bee may be attracted by sweet fragrance and that may harm you. Wildlife may realize that smell and never come back again.

Guideline for trekking tourist

- Use only designated trail or area to avoid damaging the nature or getting lost.
- Avoid causing wild fire from setting fire or littering cigarette.
